INTERNATIONAL GUEST LECTURE ON ENTREPRENEURSHIP DEVELOPMENT

To equip the students with entrepreneurship skills, Entrepreneurship Development Cell organized a guest lecture on 'Entrepreneurship Development' for the registered students on 12th August 2015. The resource person was Mr. Michael Hubbard, 23 years old from Cape town, South Africa, a Tech Entrepreneur, web developer and business analyst. He is the founder and CEO of "Laine", a web development company which focuses on web-based software and also develops mobile and desktop solutions. He has worked with clients in various industries including manufacturing, services and medicine. His latest projects have focused on Medical IT, specifically designing and developing solutions to aid researchers conducting clinical trials capture, manage and analyse their data. He was also Vice President Communications at AIESEC University of Cape Town, focusing on public relations and marketing campaigns during 2013-14. He was a Team Leader at "Africa in Me" which is a global branding campaign for AIESEC in Africa to promote internships in the Africa region during 2012-13. It was co-developed by Mr. Michael at the AIESEC African regional summit in Mozambique. He was an international community development intern, worked as an international Exchange Participant with Courtesy Foundation in Hyderabad, India, through AIESEC where he spent 2 months from December 2011 to January 2012, living with 55 young children in an orphanage in Hyderabad, India. He also has honors and rewards to his credit. He was finalist at International Telecommunication Union, Open innovation Competition in 2011 and was invited to Geneva to present his idea. He was also winner of "Indiafrica Young Visionary Fellowship award" in 2012 for the best health care project in Africa. He works with a development team in India and clients around the globe, always available for projects.

He spoke about the qualities to become a successful entrepreneur. He said that "only you are responsible for what you don't know." Risk is always there in business and if there is no risk then there are no profits. Ups and downs are essential and if there is upside there is always a downside to it and we need to protect the downside. Failure is a difficult decision so to avoid failure take right decision at right time. He said that money is a tool so to make money you need money and hence money should be dealt practically. To start a business, have initial source of investment and then start working on it. He spoke about 'Tough Love', Friendship and Business are two separate things and one must be careful while employing friends. He said that be good at work to convince the clients and presentation matters the most. An entrepreneur should be able to lead his team by interacting with the team members in case of any disputes to avoid failure in business. An entrepreneur should be ready to face when he is wrong, argue the facts and explain why you feel that you are right. He said that there is a need for evolution as market is changing and there's always more than you expected so mentally and financially find solutions to survive. He addressed the students to be the best, passionate about work, act confidently and being an entrepreneur teaches one to be happy and also to learn from the experiences. The session was a real eye opener and had a good impact on the students.
